Westview Boys' Home, a children's home that has served boys for over 50 years, has an opening for a summer intern as a part of its Summer 2011 program. Compensation

- A private room in one of our houses

- $3,000 for the complete summer, paid twice monthly

Training we provide

- Distance learning (in advance)
 - Residential Child Care Standards
 - Handling of Confidential Information

 - Westview Houseparent Handbook (supervisory policies and procedures)
- On campus
 - Red Cross First Aid and CPR

Time

- The intern should complete the distance learning and some event planning by May.
- The first week in June will be spent in on-campus training and acculturation.
- The internship will finish during the second week of August.
- The intern will have one day per week off (Sunday is a work day).

Challenges

- Hollis (population 2,000) is a rural farming and ranching community in a county with a low per capita income (Harmon County).
- The nearest Wal-Mart is 35 miles away.
- Churches in this area tend to be conservative; regardless of the intern's personal theological boundaries, this person should be able to operate respectfully within the theological and political milieu of this region.
- Working with our boys is exciting, interesting, and emotionally demanding. Gains are slow and hard-won. Team members encourage one another, resist relational triangulation, and patiently and persistently model the life of Christ.
- This intern will have the opportunity to make a difference in the lives of our boys and a contribution to our team. At the same time, those who come to learn with us will fare better than those who think that they have all of the answers. Regardless of your years, your age is both advantage and vulnerability.
- This is not a "gopher" job, but it will require that you go and do whatever it takes to accomplish your own ministry responsibilities successfully.
